

Teaching With Style

When students are asked to describe the one thing they would change about their teachers if they could, what do you think they say? More advanced degrees? How about easier homework assignments? Maybe longer vacations?

The answer is: people really do want to learn, whether in church, school, or in a training class at work. But one giant obstacle often stands in their way: BOREDOM! That's the number one hindrance. Communicators don't intentionally want to bore students. So let the God who created the rainbows brighten your teaching style! In this 6-part series, your teaching staff will discover the biblical basis for style. And find out why, when it comes to teaching, liveliness is next to godliness.
